Examples of My Content Production

I approach content creation from a thoughtful eight step process, my businessman hat thoroughly in place throughout. The process consists of:

- 1) Determining goals.
- 2) Determining the audience I want to reach.
- 3) Researching keywords.
- 4) Researching how competitors have addressed their audiences with similar content.
- 5) Creating and uploading content.
- 6) Analyzing SEO and keyword targeting, editing as necessary.
- 7) Promoting the content.
- 8) Experimenting with the content to maximize conversions, implementing changes as needed.

The process is exemplified by the following work:

1) This is the first post from my content marketing portfolio site. In it, I make the argument that tech startups need to hire content marketers from outside of the tech bubble:

2) Nearly all of my business' customer conversions are a direct result of my content marketing. I strive to make compelling arguments on my sites:

4) This is the media kit I created for my multi-market Spanish-language entertainment and current events newspaper. In it, I conveyed our unique value position through empirical data as well as the written word:

5) I created all of the content for my nonprofit. The exposure I gained through the content earned me opportunities to spread my message further on television and radio:
